RAMADHAN DIARY - SEEKING THE LOVE OF ALLAH

INTRODUCTION

No single booklet can fully convey the many treasures that Ramadhan holds, for a believer. It is a time when one cuts himself off from worldly norms and renews himself to Allah [swt] - his Creator. He disciplines his mind, heart, hands, feet, tongue and stomach to act only in accordance to that which Allah [swt] loves. In the process, the believer's heart, is cleaned and washed to its deepest and most innermost parts not from earthly water but from divine rain - the final revelation - The Qur'an.

The Qur'an Project sought to maximise exposure of the Qur'an and the message it brings by running several advertising campaigns, both locally and nationally.

Offering thought provoking messages, the billboard campaigns proved to be a great success, eliciting a huge response from non-Muslims wishing to learn more about the Qur'an.

Amidst a time when misinformation about Islam and animosity towards it is escalating, the Qur'an Project launched its campaign: 'Less Hating and More Educating - Read the Qur'an today.' It involved stalls, billboards and newspapers campaigns. The sad irony is that today's intellectuals and journalists who are attacking Islam are the very same people who have never actually picked up a copy of the Qur'an and read it.

OLYMPIC GAMES 2012

In 2012, the city of London hosted the Olympic games. With a team of dedicated volunteers, the Quran Project used this one-off opportunity to convey the message of Qur'an. Around the Olympic village, volunteers distributed USBs - each containing a translation of the Qur'an and other da'wah-related media - to visitors attending the events. The USBs were styled in the form of the ubiquitous gold medal, thereby capturing the attention of recipients.

Thousands of USBs were distributed and several shahadahs (testimonies of faith) took place. The Olympic campaign proved to be an excellent opportunity to convey the message Qur'an internationally.
